A BODY IN A BAG.
A Frenchman Arrested, Who Was Carrying a Bag in Which the Body of a Murdered Woman Was Found.

NEW YORK, May 20.—At 3 o'clock this morning a Frenchman, who proved to be Louis Francis, of 307 Tenth avenue, was arrested while on his way to the North River, bearing on his back a bag containing the mutilated corpse of a woman who had been murdered. The policeman was attracted by Francis' mysterious manner as he moved along, weighted down by his ghastly burden, and he was stopped and asked what the bag contained. The Frenchman refused to give any explanation and attempted to move on, but the officer insisted upon being informed as to the contents of the sack, and took Francis into custody. The policeman then seized Francis by the arm, whereupon he dropped the bag and its contents upon the sidewalk. It fell, with a "swishing" sound, to the flag, and the officer upon opening the end of the sack found, to his surprise and horror, that it contained the mutilated body of a woman. The body was doubled up and in an almost nude condition. The policeman upon making a closer examination, found unmistakable evidence of the fact that the woman had been murdered. There were ghastly wounds about the head and also on the trunk from which the blood had flown freely, and had coagulated on the corpse. Francis was asked for an explanation of the mysterious affair, and after recovering from his confusion, declared that the corpse was that of his wife, and that she had died a natural death. Being without the means necessary to defray the expenses of a funeral, he had conceived the idea of carrying the corpse to the river and throwing it in. The officer refused to accept the explanation. Francis again shouldered the body and bore the remains to the police station. He was placed under arrest, and steps were taken to investigate the supposed mysterious crime. Francis is about thirty-seven years of age, and made no attempt to explain the affair when closely questioned, other than to repeat the story that his wife had died at their home on Tenth avenue, and that he was simply depositing the corpse in the river on account of his inability to give it a Christian burial.

Louis Francis tells the following story: Yesterday I found a valuable dog which my wife afterwards lost. I reproached my wife for losing him and she swore at me. At 7:30 o'clock last night she sent me out for beer. When I came back I found a man named William Welsh in the room with her. Welsh was in the same shop with me. She sat on my lap and kissed me, then she threw a glass at me and then a can, she then went out. She walked out half a block then I left them to come out. When I came back she was lying on the floor dead. I worked an hour thinking she would revive, she did not. I don't know what was the cause of her death. She told me before she died that she did not care for me, but she liked the man who put up the wine for her. He is Leopold Baconville, and she lived with Mrs. Lydell on Broadway. After I found my wife dead I took sixteen cents and went out and got a drink. In half an hour I came back and put her in the bag to throw her into the river.

The woman was not Francis' wife. She was Selma Fehet, thirty-eight years old, with a son eighteen years of age, who lives in Boston. Francis, who is one year younger than his paramour, has worked for some time in a French polishing marble yard. Three months ago the couple moved into a tenement where the crime was committed. Francis lived on the second floor, and the rear structure. His three rooms were comfortably furnished and neatly kept. Both were persons above the average in appearance in the neighborhood, but both drank freely of beer, the man often to excess. They quarrelled frequently. Two weeks ago, while in one of his convivial moods, he beat and kicked her while she was on the floor. He upon picking her up was heard by tenants in the house to say, "I guess I've finished her this time." As the body of Selma Fehet lay in the police station, this morning, it had the appearance of one having been that of a pretty woman. Even the traces of dissipation could not destroy this impression. She was of delicate complexion; large, expressive blue eyes, thick, wavy, light brown hair, and petite in figure, probably weighing about 100 pounds. On the corpse were scrupulously clean underwear, a black skirt and embroidered night dress; about the neck was a twisted silk handkerchief, and about the throat lines of discoloration and marks of finger nails. It was evident that the woman had been strangled to death by twisting the handkerchief about her throat.

BREWERS' CONVENTION.
A Variety of Business Transacted, and Several Speeches Were Made.

NEW YORK, May 20.—The Brewers' Association continued in annual convention to-day. An address of welcome was made by William A. Miles, President of the Brewers' Association. He congratulated the delegates upon the work of the association in preventing legislation inimical to the interests it represents. Mr. B. H. Schumann, of Brooklyn, made an address of some length. The Secretary read the report of the Board of Trustees.

The discussion of the board refusing aid to C. Maus, of Indianapolis, for payment of expenses incurred by him in a patent suit about a bunging apparatus company, was spread upon the report. An amendment to pick up the report was defeated, and the report was adopted.

The report embodied a resolution that declared that the association would not be responsible for the utterances of its trade journals, unless the utterances are attested by the proper officers. The report insisted upon a complete separation of malt and ardent liquors, and the course of fiscal discriminations in favor of the milder beverages as are at present effected by the Federal laws. This so far as the license system, restrictively applied, is concerned.

The report of the Publication Committee was adopted, excepting the request for an appropriation of $10,000, which was referred to a committee. Louis Schode, of Washington, attorney for the association, reviewed the National legislation affecting the association.

The report of the Advisory Committee was presented. The committee was composed of that the consolidated bunging apparatus Company is the legal successor to the various companies having heretofore existed, but the committee, however, had not undertaken to decide on the validity of the patent owned by said company, or to give them the right to war against the use of other safety valves and bungs. The committee suggested they be empowered to consult counsel before entering into any patent litigation. The report was adopted, except the last suggestion, which was referred.

The report of the Finance Committee showed the receipts were $26,841; expenditures, $19,182; balance, $16,341. An adjournment until to-morrow was then taken.

Professor Odium's Death.
NEW YORK, May 20.—The body of Robert E. Odium, who jumped from the Brooklyn Bridge yesterday and died from the effects thereof, remains at the undertakers. An autopsy will be made this afternoon, although really not needed, a superficial examination of the body showing plainly the cause of death. Five ribs are broken on the right side, and it is evident that the heart was fatally effected by the force with which his body struck the water. No marks have been issued by the Coroner for the arrest of any person connected with the affair. To-day James Haggart, who accompanied Odium on his mission to take the fatal jump, was arraigned in a Brooklyn Police Court on a charge of aiding Odium to commit an act endangering the latter's life. Another charge against him is "outraging public decency in aiding the act. Accused was committed to jail without bail for examination.

General Grant's Condition Improves.
NEW YORK, May 20.—General Grant had a good night last night. "He slept right hard," said Jesse Grant this morning. "It was the best night's rest he has had in quite a long time, and he looks and acts bright this morning."

At the consultation at General Grant's house this afternoon, the doctors found no marked change. Some parts of the swelling below and behind the ear has subsided and less pain is the result. Since Sunday the General has experienced none of the pains that last week centered at the ear.

FROM ACROSS THE SEAS.

The Zanzibar German Agent Rohlf's Recalled—A British Sentry Found Dead at His Post.

The Spanish Treaty Rupture—Pictures Mutilated—Two Deaths from Cholera Reported from Marseilles.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

The Rumored Recall of the German Agent at Zanzibar.

BERLIN, May 20.—The Cologne Gazette says it is rumored that Dr. Rohlf, the German agent in Zanzibar, has been recalled. The reason given for the recall is said to be the unsatisfactory management on his part which resulted in the recent occupation by 300 Zanzibar troops of the headquarters of German East African Company, in Zanzibar, possessions which the company claim to have obtained by valid treaties with the native chiefs. When the seizure was made the company protested and sent a remonstrance to Berlin. Prince Bismarck at once ordered Dr. Rohlf to report on the matter. His report having been found unsatisfactory, his recall was, it is said, at once ordered.

General Wilson's Report of the Khartoum Relief Expedition.

LONDON, May 20.—General Sir Charles Wilson, who succeeded General Sir Herbert Stewart in the command of the advance corps of the Khartoum relief expedition after the latter was wounded, has sent in his official report in response to the charge that General Gordon might have been rescued alive if the troops under command of Sir Charles had not been unnecessarily halted at Gubat for three days. The report explains this three days delay in starting up the Nile to relieve General Gordon by the necessity of securing the small force at Gubat against an attack then threatened from Berber in the north. The report further states that after the arrival of the troops at Gubat it required a great deal of time to prepare the steamers for the advance to Khartoum.

A Sentry Murdered at Chatham.

LONDON, May 20.—A sentry at the Upnor Castle Powder Magazine, at Chatham, who went on duty at 4 o'clock this morning, was found dead at his post two hours later. Beside him lay a revolver, and a bullet had passed through his lungs. The sentry on post 300 yards away says he heard no report of a pistol or gun. The doctors who have examined the corpse do not believe that the sentry committed suicide. From the position in which his body and rifle were found, the authorities are disposed to regard the case as one of assassination, committed to make, possibly, an attempt to blow up the magazine.

The Rupture in the Spanish Commercial Treaty.

LONDON, May 20.—The Madrid correspondent of the Times, commenting upon the rupture in the commercial treaty negotiations between Spain and England, charges Spain with seeking to evade the favored nation clause. The Spanish newspapers, the Iberia and the Imperial, on the other hand, accuse England of having changed her views during the negotiations and of having failed to keep her agreement.

MADRID, May 20.—In the Senate yesterday Senator Euzen, Minister of Foreign Affairs, delivered a long speech, in the course of which he stated that the rupture of the commercial negotiations with England was due to a misunderstanding on the part of the English Cabinet regarding the declarations and powers of Spain.

The Brunswick Succession.

BERLIN, May 20.—The proposal of the Prussian Government concerning the Brunswick succession will be discussed by the German Bundesrath to-morrow. The National Zeitung says the proposal is that the Bundesrath should express its opinion that the administration of the Government of Brunswick by the Duke of Cumberland would be incompatible with the internal peace and the security of the empire.

Canadian Pacific Railway.

LONDON, May 20.—The Times, in an editorial, says: "The completion of the Canadian Pacific Railroad is a most important step toward the consolidation of the Empire. It is a priceless advantage to have command of a great line of railway uniting two oceans, beyond the reach of hostile attack and free from the restraint of a possibly embarrassing neutrality."

Meeting of Army Comrades—How a Boy Thinks—Faulkner When He Is Crossed.

General Denby's Qualifications for a Foreign Mission—A Guess About the Speech That Mr. Hendricks Will Make to the Law Students of Yale.

[Special Correspondence of the Sentinel.]

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Mr. Hendricks, in his room at Willard's, was greatly enjoying a visit last evening. "Come in," he responded to a rap at his door. "I am delighted to see you," were the Vice President's next words. "Governor Plaisted, allow me to introduce you to Senator Van Wyck." A careful look in which there was mutual recognition followed, and with tears of joy the two eminent gentlemen of such varied fortune, grown gray since their last meeting, rushed into each other's arms. Old comrades, who together had known the vicissitudes of war—in camp, on the march, crossing floods, warming their benumbed fingers over the decaying embers of a picket fire, and who, together under the flag, had joined in the shout of victory, were again united. One enriched with all the honors that the State of Maine could confer, and the other representing Wisconsin in the grandest legislative body in the world. The rapture of the meeting only a long, glad embrace could have expressed.

SOLDIERS' ATTACHMENTS.

This love—it transcends mere friendship—begotten of army life is full of mystery. It grows on a fellow as he gets older.

"Time but the impression deeper makes As streams their channels deeper wear."

Old memories bring a sense of brotherhood, and they meet by chance or appointment fondly, and without stage acting. That love, abused and misdirected, kept the Republican party long beyond the period of its usefulness in power. With more interest than they see the President or look through the department, soldiers now located in the West visiting Washington mark points passed in the march or grounds on which they camped during the war. On the anniversary of a battle of Champion's Hill I received such a letter from General Dan Macaulay, now of Columbus, O., as the angels might have written. I will not, however, assume to be absolute authority on the literature of the spheres.

CHARACTERS INTRODUCED.

There is a young man here who bears the same relation to John L. Robinson, once a conspicuous figure in Indiana politics, that Senator Harrison does to President Harrison. He is a bright, promising boy, of industry and correct habits, to whom Chester L. Faulkner is a self-appointed and accepted guardian. Faulkner and the boy's grandfather were bosom friends, and the "old man from Ripley" has always owed affection to the family. When Congress is in session the young man is a page. During the periods of adjournment he goes to school—day school and night school. Continuing his present rapid progress, he will graduate next year. That character of a boy is liable to develop into a United States Senator, observed a gentleman, alluding to him the other day.

"Come, Ed, get ready and go to church," was Faulkner's command on Sunday morning.

"Where are you going?" asked the boy. "I'm not feeling very well and will take a walk."

"I'm not feeling well enough to go to church and would like to take a walk myself."

"You must go to church, you are a boy."

"I don't think it's fair to make me go to church if I am a boy, when you are going to walk out for enjoyment. You won't have me to go where you won't go, you have said, and you ought not to make me go where you will not go."

The old gentleman acknowledging the force of the young gentleman's arguments, concluded with: "Well I'll go along with you to church, if you are bound to have it that way."

Last night as the hour hand was pointing to 10, Mr. Faulkner said: "Ed, Ed, go to bed; never sit around sleeping on a chair that way."

"I'm not sleeping."

"What are you doing?"

"I'm thinking." The boy never lived that will cheerfully withdraw from company for the prosaic purpose of sleeping.

"Well, go to bed, and by 6 in the morning you will perhaps have thought it out."

The commencement exercises of the school attended by Ed Robinson will occur next Thursday. Mr. Lamar, Mr. Voorhees and other eminent gentlemen are to speak. Mr. Hendricks has been invited. Tickets were issued for the Vice President and Mrs. Hendricks.

"I had forgotten that Mrs. Hendricks is not in Washington," explained the gentleman delivering the tickets.

"That is perhaps fortunate. I will remain longer than anticipated. I am expecting the return of Mrs. Hendricks. She is liable to be here, and, of course, I will want her to accompany me."

After Ed has graduated, the plan is to go through law school, and then go to Washington Territory with Charley Voorhees.

FAULKNER OUT OF SORTS.

Lately, in a burst of confidence, Ed whispered to me as we were coming down in the Capitol elevator, "Mr. Faulkner is out of sorts to-day."

"How do you know?"

"He orders me around, and his answers to Mr. Voorhees are crusty."

"Is he frequently that way?"

"Always when things drag at the Pension Office. I know him like a book. Once, when he had a quarrel with Colonel Dudley, we couldn't hardly live with him for a month, and he never came back to himself until the thing was all fixed up."

MUST HAVE IT.

Ignatius Donnelly, the Shakespearean annihilating fiend, is as handsome a man as I have met in Washington. Mr. Lamar said to him the other day: "Donnelly, I wish you the most pronounced success in every-
